Truck Hannah Aids Fohllies To Win by 4--3

Two Bad Throws by Yankee Catcher Responsible for Two of Visitors' Runs

By Charles A. Taylor Truck Hannah is blocking all the traffic which the Yankees had headed toward Pennantville. Truck it was who, by his miserable throwing and general all-round arkwardness yesterday afternoon, aided and abetted the Cleveland Fohllies in winning their second straight game from the Yanks. The score was 4 to 3. The Chicago White Sox also won, and as a result the Colonels' Boys are plunged deeper the Colonels' Boys are plunged deeper into third place.

Stanley Coveleskie, one of the two brothers who have always taken the greatest delight in humbling the baseball teams of the Big Town, was in the box for the visitors, and barring one inning, when the home nine collected three hits and two runs, Stanley was not very much worried as to the was not very much worried as to the outcome. Truck Hannah had made his pathway more than smooth early in the contest, and all Coveleskie had to do was to hold tight to the lead Truck had furnished him.

Quinn Deserves Better Fate

The hard-working Jack Quinn was the Yankee twirler for seven innings, and it is possible that Jack might have aqueezed out a vistory despite Truck if he had been permitted to remain on the mound, but he was removed to allow Al Wickland to make his third vain attempt in the pinch hitting line. The new outfielder showed some improvement as he succeeded in remaining provement, as he succeeded in rapping the ball as far as the pitcher on this occasion, whereas on his two previous appearances in the pinch he had fanned.

Yankees Make Stand

The Yankees made a brave stand in their half, but fell one short of tying their half, but fell ene short of tying up the game. Vick singled to left and took an extra base on Graney's fumble. Mere to Speaker, but Baker doubled to left, tallying Vick. Lewis singled over third, scoring Baker, and Coveleskie was on the anxious seat. Pipp helped the Cleveland pitcher out of his difficulty by swinging wildly at the first ball pitched him and was retired on a pop to Lunte. Pratt walked, but Ping Bodie, whose batting average is dwindling with startling rapidity, fanned and it was all over.

Form for the day of conflict is a big factor in any test. This factor may easily decide the issue of the Willard-Dempsey fight.

You have known days when your work came as easily as lighting a cigarette. And you have known other days when the job looked tougher than moving a young mountain.

The same may easily apply to Willard and Dempsey. Both may be right-or both may be stale and out of gear. But if one is right-and the other is off-the first canters in.

The main trouble here is that very often not even the contender himself can ever know he is out of gear until it is all over-and too late to be of any interest.

Along the Route

It's a great life if you don't weaken-but the majority do.

There are too many entries who, instead of playing the game, let the game play them.

Did you ever stop and notice that the contender who makes good rarely has any time left to waste in knocking some one else?

at the same time Keller reached Dempsey frequently with a straight left. In this perfunctory exhibition Dempsey seemed to be a target for the left and that is Willard's best blow.
Willard seems to be having the same trouble as ladies trying to reduce. The more he exercises the more he eats.
His waist line is as uncertain as March weather. One day he looks quite slim, on the next the suggestion of the bay window is quite pronounced.
Hemple Hits Hard

Yesterday Willard called upon his sparring partners to hammer him at their hardest. They did and all of been in active training since the armistice, will have at the stadium his first battle since before the war, when he knocked out Bombardier Wells, of England, in the fifth round of their bout.

Little Joe Chip was the only one that Willard did not punish to any extent. Little Joseph feinted cleverly and landed many a swing to Willard's loose hanging jaw. Walter Monahan, who used to do the brother set with loose hanging jaw. Walter Monahan who used to do the brother act wit Willard in the circus, came in for qui rapid succession to bring him down.

On the other hand, Dempsey lacan be hit and most easily hit with straight left. Willard has about powerful a straight left as has been known. It works slowly, perhaps and ponderously, but it has pile in force, behind it.

force behind it.

Dempsey is in superb condition the present writing. The known bronzed muscles of his back play beautifuly as he works. He is sphery and he exudes vitality. His spring is catilite and his bloom. catlike and his blows are lightn

Willard Not Yet Ready

Frankly, I do not think Willard is n as good shape as he might be. that he is in poor shape. But I be-lieve he should have more than a Five Straight Defeats he should nave more be month more of hard work. Long be-

> He has cut out even the road work and his exercise is confined to the few rounds he boxes with very mediocre sparring partners. But Willard is his own manager and training director. If he should lose on the fourth through lack of condition the fault will be his alone,

When I say that Willard might be in better condition I do not mean that he has deteriorated as Jeffries did.
